

The logo features the words "REVOLUTION" and "DAY" in a bold, sans-serif font, stacked vertically. They are centered within a circular frame that has small tick marks around its perimeter. This circle is further enclosed by a larger square frame with lines extending from the center to the midpoints of each side, creating a crosshair effect.

REVOLUTION DAY

A GAME OF REVOLUTION, CONSPIRACY, AND SECRET AGENDAS
BY BEN SWAINBANK

THE MITHRIL MINE

OVERVIEW & OBJECTIVE

OVERVIEW

The day after rigging his own re-election, the president of a nation torn by civil war plans to travel across the capital city and consolidate his power. Powerful leaders within the regime and among the rebel forces are conspiring to assassinate the president, seize power, and pursue their own destiny on this fateful day.

OBJECTIVE

During game setup, each player will draw a leader card that determines their win conditions. Some leaders align with the rebels; others serve the regime. Each has a unique set of objectives which will guide their style of play. Initially, which player controls which leader is a secret, but each leader also has powerful abilities that can only be used after their identity has been revealed.

SETUP

- Put the 6 location cards in the center of the table in this order: Street -> HQ -> Street -> Arena -> Street -> Palace.
- Take the President card and set it aside. The President begins the game out of play.
- Extract and shuffle the 8 leader cards.
- Shuffle the remaining cards into the draw deck.
- Players randomly and secretly select one of the 8 leader cards and put it into their hand. Put the remaining leaders away without looking at them.
- Each player then draws 4 more cards from the draw deck to form an opening hand of 5 cards.
- Randomly determine which player goes first.

PLAYING THE GAME

Play proceeds with players taking turns in a clockwise order until the end of the game. During your turn you:

- Draw a card
- Take two actions

ENDING THE GAME

If the President reaches the Palace and then advances one more time, then the President has survived his date with destiny, and the game ends immediately. If the President is eliminated, then each player, including the current player, has three more turns to consolidate power. After each player has taken three more turns, the game ends.

DRAW PHASE

During the draw phase, draw a card from the top of the draw deck.

If no cards remain in the deck, the President has not been eliminated, and you have a Motorcade card in your hand, you must immediately play a Motorcade card. This does not count as one of your actions.

ACTION PHASE

During your action phase, you can take two actions. As an action, you can do one of five things:

- Draw a card
- Play a character card
- Play a motorcade card
- Move a character you control to an adjacent location
- Activate an Activate Ability on a character you control

PLAYING A CHARACTER CARD

When playing a character card, place the card near one of the 6 locations and near other cards at that location that you have played and control. Use the colored arrows at each location to indicate who controls each set of cards.

Characters can only be played at the location types indicated on their cards. A character without the secure designation can not be played at the HQ or Palace locations. That character could be moved to one of those locations after it is played.

PLAYING A MOTORCADE CARD

When you play a Motorcade card, advance the President one location, moving him closer to the Palace and beyond. If the President is not yet in play, the President enters the game at the first Street location. If a Motorcade is played when the President is at the Palace, then the President has survived his day, and the game ends immediately.

- Motorcade cards can not be played until each player has had a turn. Players can not play Motorcade cards on their first turn.
- If the President has been eliminated, you can play a Motorcade card to move any character you control to any location.
- During the draw phase, if no cards are remaining in the deck, the President has not been eliminated, and you have a Motorcade card in your hand, you must immediately play a Motorcade card and advance the President. This does not count as one of your actions.

MOVING A CHARACTER CARD

As an action, you can move a character card you control from one location to an adjacent location.

At the new location, put the card near other cards you control and orient it so that it's clear who controls the cards at each location.

Blended cards that have been revealed may blend again and be changed to face-down when they move to the new location.

⚡ USING AN ACTIVATE ABILITY

Many characters have Activate abilities. As an action, you can use one of these abilities on a card you control.

- When choosing a target, choose a card at the same location.
- If you eliminate a card, move that card to the discard pile.
- Each Activate ability can only be used once each turn. You can use multiple actions to use multiple different abilities on the same character.

Some activated abilities trigger an alarm. When using these abilities, the alarm is fully resolved, including any responses. If the character who initiated the action has not been eliminated, then the ability resolves, and any targets are chosen from the remaining characters.

Abilities can be activated, and related alarms triggered, even if there is not a valid target for the ability.

ATTRIBUTES

There are two special attributes that characters can have: Protected and Blend.

🛡️ PROTECTED

Characters with the Protected attribute are important figures that will be protected by other people within their faction.

- A protected character can not be chosen as a target for elimination when there are other viable targets from the same faction at the location.
- The President can only be targeted when all the other regime cards at his location have been eliminated.
- Cards you control do not count towards this protection, and you do not have to eliminate them.

👁️ BLEND

Characters with the Blend attribute are good at blending in with the crowd. Adversaries know they are there, but are unable to determine their role, allegiance, or capabilities until they reveal themselves.

- A character with the Blend attribute may be played face-down to conceal their identity from other players.
- Before you use an Activate ability on a blended character, flip it over to reveal it.
- When you move a revealed character with blend to another location, you can flip that character back over.
- You can look at your blended characters at any time, and can shuffle blended cards you control to obscure which is which before putting them back down at the same location.
- You can reveal your blended characters at any time, except in the middle of an Activated ability that targets a blended character.
- Blended characters do not count as regime or rebel cards while they are face-down, including when choosing targets.

ALARMS & RESPONSE

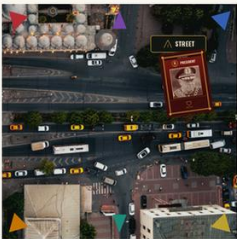

⚠️ ALARMS

Some Activated abilities trigger alarms. When that happens, the alarm is resolved before the rest of the ability.

🔄 RESPONDING TO AN ALARM

- When resolving an alarm, proceed around the table, allowing each player to respond.
- When it is your chance to respond, one character you control, at that location, can immediately use a response ability.
- Blended characters must reveal themselves to respond.
- The current player, who triggered the alarm, does have the opportunity to respond after everyone else has.
- The same character who triggered the alarm can not use a response ability.
- If the character that set off the initial alarm is eliminated by a response, then the rest of the Activate ability that triggered the alarm does not resolve.

BEFORE

AFTER

1. Player 1 is trying to eliminate the President, who is currently at the HQ.
2. Player 1 has a blended Gunman, Player 2 has two blended cards, and Player 3 has a Death Squad on the second Street location.
3. As their first action, Player 1 plays a Motorcade to advance the President to the second Street location.
4. Player 1 would like to eliminate the President, but first needs to get rid of the Death Squad protecting him. As their second action, Player 1 reveals their Gunman and announces they are using the Activate ability, setting off the alarm.
5. Player 2 has the first opportunity to respond. They reveal one of their blended cards is Secret Police, and use its response to eliminate the Gunman.
6. Player 3 uses their Death Squad response. They declare they are eliminating the Secret Police and the President.
7. Player 2 reveals their second blended card is a Prominent Citizen. Player 3 must eliminate the Prominent Citizen instead of the President.
8. Player 1's Gunman has been eliminated. The ability that set off the initial alarm does not resolve.

LEADERS

Your leader card is held in your hand and can be played and used just like any of your other character cards.

- Leaders can also be eliminated while in play.
- Many (but not all) leaders have survival as one of their win conditions. In order to have "survived," your leader must avoid being eliminated and must be in play, at one of the locations, at the end of the game.
- If the President is eliminated and you still have your leader in your hand, then you must play your leader card as your first action during your turn.
- Your leader will belong to either the rebel or regime faction. This has no impact on which cards you can play and which abilities you can activate. All players can play cards from both factions.

WINNING THE GAME

Your initial leader card determines your objectives and win conditions for the game. Pay close attention to how you can achieve your objectives and what your opponents are trying to do. This is the key to victory on Revolution Day!

ADDITIONAL RULES & RULINGS

- If all the players win, then everyone loses.
- In a two-player game, the President can not be eliminated until after he has passed through the HQ location.
- With six or more players, everyone begins with only their leader cards in hand. You do not draw up to an initial hand size of 5.
- Protected characters are not protected by other protected characters. If the only remaining targets are protected, then either may be eliminated.
- Activate abilities and other effects that specify a location for placing characters (including "this location" or "any location") allow you to ignore the usual location restrictions for placing cards.
- Blended characters can not reveal themselves during an Activated action that targets a blended character, including when a character reveals themselves in order to perform such an action.
- Blended characters can reveal themselves during any other Activated action, including just before targets are selected.
- You do not have to take both your actions. You can pass on taking one or both.
- The effects created by eliminating a character (like the Celebrity or Martyr) are resolved after any current Activated action is fully resolved (including all responses and eliminations that resulted from the action).
- Characters with both Protected and Blend attributes do not receive any benefits from Protection while they are blended.
- Characters can not target themselves.
- Characters you control can target other characters you control.
- You can still use the Master Assassin's ability to return to your hand after the President has been eliminated. You may play a card other than the Master Assassin when using this ability. If the Master Assassin (or any other leader) is in your hand after the President has been eliminated, then you must play the leader as an action.
